NEWS FROM NORFOLK'S VILLAGES

ONE OF NORFOLK'S BEST-KNOWN STORES

The white building in the foreground (left) is the general store and postoffice at Lynedoch operated by W. R. Halliday. Close by are the sites of the old store and warehouses owned by Hon. W. A. Charlton for whom Mr. Halliday went to work 52 years ago.

Lynedoch Man is One of Norfolk's Oldest Merchants

W. R. Halliday Has Been Connected With Store and Post Office for 52 Years—Was First Associated With Hon. W. A. Charlton.

DRIVES HIS OWN CAR ALTHOUGH AGED 78

Fifty-two years ago, March 28th, W. R. Halliday arrived in Lynedoch to go to work for the Hon. W. A. Charlton. In the intervening years he has stood behind the counter in the general store there and watched the amazing transition of his adopted community from a lumbering centre to the veritable heart of this county's tobacco industry. Mr. Charlton has passed on and so have hundreds of others who were customers of the Charlton store when Mr. Halliday was a clerk. Today, as one of this county's oldest merchants in point of service he can look back on a full and happy life.

It was on March 28, 1882 that Mr. Halliday first took his place in the Charlton store which also housed the postoffice. For more than half a century he has been serving the needs of his fellow citizens and serving them well. His store today is situated but a few rods from the site of the building in which he first worked but there still remain a few who can drop in and chat of the old days when W. A. Charlton mounted the hustings in political campaigns which make today's elections seem tame by comparison.

Twenty-three years Mr. Halliday spent in Mr. Charlton's employ. In 1905 the Charlton store and warehouses were destroyed by fire and following this event the present owner bought the business and has since continued as general merchant and postmaster.

An Ardent Church-Goer

He has taken a leading part in the affairs of his community, as one might well imagine. Prior to Church Union he was a staunch Presbyterian and is today one of the valued members of Lynedoch United Church. In addition to other honors which have befallen him, one of his most prized is that of honorary superintendent of the Sunday School. It is said that one would be as likely to not see the minister in Church of a Sunday as to find Mr. Halliday missing.

Today at 78 he enjoys good health and is keenly interested in his business as when he first entered Mr. Charlton's employ. It is a tribute to his sagacity and personality that his store has been so markedly successful in these days of intense competition when automobiles can carry the rural buyers to larger centres and when mail order houses have made inroads on the country storekeeper's livelihood. These things fail to worry Mr. Halliday who can attribute his success to fair dealing and the same high merchandising policies which existed when he first entered business.

A Friend of All

It is a thriving community which he serves. The tobacco industry has literally been developed under his nose, the first farm to ever grow a crop in this county being located a short distance from Lynedoch. Many growers today attest to his generosity without which it is possible that some of them would have been forced out of business during years when unfavorable growing conditions and low prices played havoc with the farmer.

His fondness for children is evidenced by the keen interest which he takes in Sunday school work and the younger generation will be among the first to attest to his kindly nature.

Keeping pace with the times he is an ardent motorist and drives his own car.

Mr. and Mrs. Halliday have a daughter, Miss Margaret Halliday B.A., a graduate of the University of Western Ontario, who makes her home with them.

AMUSING PLAY GIVEN BY WILSONVILLE CAST

"Bashful Mr. Bobbs" Presented to Waterford Audience by Tennis Club.

Waterford.—The play "Bashful Mr. Bobbs" as presented by the Wilsonville Tennis Club and sponsored by the Waterford Women's Institute in the town hall, Waterford, was worthy of a much larger attendance. Under the able direction of Mr. Ralph Nelles it was all that could be desired, each character being well impersonated. Each act was introduced in charming manner by a quaint little lady, and no one was disappointed in the presentation of the story in three acts. The periods between the acts were filled in by clever vaudeville skits.

An orchestra supplied music and a former Waterford resident, Mr. George Renwick, favored in his usual splendid manner with cornet solos, accompanied by Miss Persall. George, who was always a favorite with Waterford audiences, has lost none of his skill as a cornet soloist, and his numbers were very much enjoyed. Those taking part are to be congratulated on the splendid manner in which they presented "Bashful Mr. Bobbs." Those in the play were as follows: Katherine Henderson, a young wife, Miss Winnie Child; Frederick Henderson, her husband, Harold Goold; Mrs. Wiggins, the landlady, Miss Dorothy Anderson; Obadiah Stump, a fresh country product, Duncan Bennett; Frances Whittaker, an athletic girl, Marion Swift; Rosalie Otis, a society bud, Marion Hayes; Mr. Robert V. Bobbs, a bashful one, Grant Riddle; Jean Graham, a Delaware peach, Miss Blanche Wheeler; Marston Bobbs, anything but bashful, Norman Bennett; Celesta Vanderpool, of the movies, Miss Hazel Nelles; Julie, the French maid from Paris, Miss Hazel Marshall.

Port Rowan. — The muskrat trapping season closed on the 15th. On the whole the catch was only one-half to one-third that of previous years. The severe drouth last fall, followed by the continued cold weather and the short trapping season has been responsible for lessening the catch. Excessive Speed Given As Cause of Adderman Death

Evidence at Inquest Told of Car Travelling 72 Miles Per Hour Prior to Fatal Accident—Two Witnesses Still Suffering From Effects.

CORONER THREATENS JURYMAN WITH FINE

That Edward Adderman, 64-year-old St. Thomas man died after an accident in which the speed of the car he was driving and his own ignorance of the road were contributing factors, was the verdict returned here Thursday by a coroner's jury. Their full verdict reads:

"We find that Edward Adderman of St. Thomas, who died in the Norfolk General Hospital on January 12, came to his death as a result of an accident on No. 3 Highway about three miles west of Delhi on the night of January 11th.

"We also find that Edward Adderman came to his death from excessive speed and a lack of knowledge of the highway at the curve."

Adderman's two companions on the ill-fated trip to a Knights of Pythias meeting in Brantford both appeared in court to give evidence. Capt. W. H. Corrie appeared still bearing the marks of the accident, having spent six weeks in hospital afterwards. Frederick Ripley was released from the hospital Thursday and had to be assisted to the witness' stand.

Claim Car Travelled 72

Although the speed of the Adderman car at the time of the accident was placed at between 45 and 50 miles an hour, Capt. Corrie related that at one point between Tillsonburg and Courtland the driver had said that they were doing 72 and that "he could do 80." Both Corrie and Ripley protested and Adderman slowed down somewhat.

They were late in leaving St. Thomas, the witness said, and after arriving in Tillsonburg the deceased spoke of making good speed between that point and Simcoe as the road from Simcoe to Brantford was very crooked and he did not know it well.

Twice on the way, related Corrie, the Adderman car had pulled off the highway on making turns and travelled on the shoulder of the road. On drawing the driver's attention to this, Adderman is said to have instructed Corrie to watch for the curve signs.

Tells Story of Crash

"The first indication I had that anything was wrong was when I saw the traffic signal at the curve," said the witness. "I was watching for it and remarked 'left curve.' Adderman said 'I've got it.' My attention was directed to a row of lights at my right, then, and I glanced at them. Immediately afterward the car gave a terrific lunge and we went off the pavement and were in trouble. I would say we were going about 45, possibly not that fast.

"After the car left the highway I was in a sort of dazed condition; I think I was thrown. The only thing I could remember was seeing the highway leaping off to the left, and we were going down an incline at a high speed. We seemed to gain speed and ahead all I could see was the lights of the car flashing on a bank or wall. After that I remember nothing until being placed in a car."

No Indication of Liquor

There was no suggestion of drinking, according to both Corrie and Frederick Ripley who followed him as a witness. Ripley was riding alone in the back seat and confirmed Corrie's version of the accident.

"Between Tillsonburg and Courtland I saw the speedometer show 61. I distinctly remember Mr. Adderman saying that we were going 72 at one point, and that he could do 80. He said, 'Don't be scared, boys,' and slowed down a bit after Mr. Corrie and I objected."

Provincial Constable Roy Taggart of Simcoe told of the car's mad career after it left the highway. Travelling 252 feet before coming to a stop with radiator buried in the far side of a river bank, the Pontiac coach at one point hurtled 23 feet through the air after striking a log.

Dr. E. W. Zumstein of Delhi had performed a postmortem on the dead man and testified to the many severe injuries he had sustained. Death, he said, was the result of a combination of injuries to head and chest.

Others to give evidence were: Constable Muir of Simcoe, Gordon Thompson, Ingersoll, Sidney Phillips and James Doherty, Delhi, and Roy Adderman of St. Thomas, son of the deceased. The jury required half an hour to reach a verdict.

Coroner Dr. R. W. Tisdale presided with W. E. Kelly, K.C., appearing for the Crown. J. B. Hare, Delhi, represented Corrie and Ripley. The jury consisted of: H. R. Crabb, foreman, C. A. Turvey, C. H. Fick, H. M. Ramsey, J. C. Austin, D. A. Austin, C. H. Martin and A. Widner.

Coroner Reprimands Juryman

At the opening of the session Dr. Tisdale severely reprimanded D. A. Austin who had failed to appear at a previous inquest in the case.

"I was informed by the constable that the case was to be adjourned," said Mr. Austin.

"Under the law, I can fine you $100 for not attending," replied the coroner. "What if I hadn't adjourned it?"

"I guess I wouldn't have been here."

"The least courtesy you could have shown was to get in touch with me," said Dr. Tisdale in closing.
